1. Background

The international Fund for Agriculture Development (IFAD) and the Government of South Sudan (GoSS) have jointly designed the South Sudan Livelihood and Resilience Project (SSLRP). The overall goal of SSLRP is to 'contribute to improved and resilient livelihoods for South Sudan rural smallholders'. The Project Development Objective is to 'Empower communities to participate in decision making processes that will result in sustainable and resilient agricultural livelihoods.' The project will be implemented in Eastern Equatoria State (Magwi and Torit counties), Central Equatoria State (Kajo-Keji and Terekeka counties) Jonglei State (Bor county). GoSS and IFAD agreed to a third part implementation arrangement and VSF-Germany was selected to implement two technical components, namely: a) Community Driven Development Plans [CDDP]; and b) Agriculture Production and Rural Livelihood Support [APRLS]. VSF-Germany will sub-contract the implementation of CDDP to AAHI, to provide technical leadership in ensuring that CBOs are formed and/or supported through a rigorous, guided, and inclusive approach, to generate development plans that will directly benefit the participating households. The second Component, however, will be implemented by the beneficiaries that will be organised as CBOs and/or sub-project committees. In some instances, APRLS are implemented by specialised SPs. For instance, the feeder roads will be sub-constructed but managed by VSF-Germany. While the other infrastructural sub-projects like community roads may be implemented through a combination of civil engineering experts – public or private - and intensive public labour-based work as an approach. To this end, sub-project committee or NGOs will carry the implementation.
